Broom Factory

An enterprise in the form of a broom factory is about under way here with George Carlstead at the head and associated with him his brothers C. C. and Dr. Ned.

All the machinery is in, the Jenkins factory building south west corner main and water street having been fitted for the manufacture of all sorts of brooms from the tiniest whisk to the largest hand sweeper.

An expert in this line from St. Louis is here superintending the factory about four or five others being necessary to the work which will go on at once, orders for brooms in greater number than the factory will be able to make in years already coming in.

There is more or less risk in manufacturing enterprises but so long as people live in houses, caves or under trees something to sweep with will be necessary and the good house wife will see to it that a broom or something answering the purpose is on hand hence we believe that there will be no left overs or dead stock at this factory especially if all its products are up to the sample exhibited here Monday. The only discouragement is to the consumer the promoters not being able to assure lower prices broom corn and all else costing more than ever before but that reasonable profits only will be demanded and taken. All who know the gentlemen engaged will readily believe.
